

Impromptu magic

This lecture is born by the constant demand to be able to suddenly perform magical effects.

The audience naturally expects the magician to be able to satisfy the most absurd requests.

In this lecture the dynamics of inquiries from any party interested in magic are analyzed and a number of effects are shown and explained that by their structure appear to be completely improvised.

As always clear lecture notes with text and explanatory pictures are available.